MRS. KORFF'S ACADEMY OF MUSIC received and replied to questions he kept his "Pray how long have you been at Andermatt?" eye on the strange lady, and considered how she

Of course there are differences in types of beauty, and she was not of the type that commended itself to Philip-so he thought. She had dark hair and a transparent olive complexion. Possibly a touch of dark blood in her, mused Philip, and he said to himself "I will take the first opportunity to look at her mails." Her features were finely modelled, with firmness of cutting that showed she was no longer in her teens, andeveloped. "Yes," said Benarty Philip, "she is handsome, but she belongs to that period of life which may be twenty four or Changaha thirty four. She has got out of her teenhood, Uhingtu that is clear." He looked at Salome. If Salome was his ideal, nothing could be more different than her type from the type of Miss Durham. There was a childlike | Fatshan simplicity in Salome, an ignorance of the world Freir which would make of her a child to grey hairs; Fushan and this strange lady had clearly none of this Gaelio simplicity and ignorance; she knew a great deal Gen. When she entered the salle-a-manger at the usual hour every seat was occupied at the table to which for some littlewhile she had been admitted. She saw at a glance that her place was taken, and she went without demur, or a look of disappointment, to the long table. She had sufficient tact to perceive that Philip disliked her, and she had no intention of pressing her society on those who did not desire it. So far from seeming vexed, a slight contemptuous smile, like the flicker of summer lightning, played about her lips. She caught Salome's eye, full of appeal and apology, and returned it with a good-natured nod. "A trifle such as this," said the nod, "will not give me offence."
